This special intelligence conveys important but rather melancholy accounts of the present effects produced by the British expedition, under General Napier, on the political and social condition of the Civil war, with its consequent anarchy, reigned all over the territory at the date of writing.

The native chiefs released from the centralized sway of Theodorus, many of them set personally free from his dangeons, had organized and raised armie to fight against the new dynasty of Gobazze, of Lasta, the nominee of the British as the successor of the deceased monarch.

Gobazze called out all his force in order to main tain his position.

His commanding General, named Mashesha, set out at the head of a strong force in pursuit of a released chief named Ali, who was in active hostility against the sovereignty of Gobazze.

The opposing forces met and a furious battle took place between them on the 25th of April.

Gobazze's force, under Mashesha, had many good soldiers of the Walda-Gallas country in its ranks, but as soon as the Walda men beheld their old chief, All, they immediately reversed their spears in the very heat of the engagement, rushed to him with joylike Nev's army to Napoleon L-turned their weapons against their late commander, Mashesha, and de-

General Grant's Formal Letter of Accept-

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29, 1868.

To General Joseph R. HAWLEY, President National

Union Republican Convention:—
In formally accepting the nomination of th

National Untion Republican Convention of the 21st of May inst. it seems proper that some statement of views beyond the mere acceptance of the nomination should be expressed. The proceedings of the Convention were marked with wisdom, moderation and patriotism, and I believe express the feeling broughout its recent trials. I endorse their resc utions. If elected to the office of President of the United States it will be my endeavor administer all the laws in good with economy and the view of giving administer all peace, quiet and protection everywhere. In times like the present it is impossible, or at least emi-nently improper, to lay down a policy to be adhered to, right or wrong, through an administration of our years. New political issues, not foreseen, are constantly arising, the views of the public on old ones are constantly changing and a purely administrative officer should always be left free to execute the will of the people. I always have respected that will, and always shall. Peace and universal prosperity-its sequence-with economy of administra ion will lighten the burden of taxation, while it

The following is the reply of Speaker Colfax to

Washington, D. C., May 30, 1868. Hon. J. R. Hawley, President of the National Washington, D. C., May 30, 1863. Hen. J. R. Hawley, President of the National Union Republican Convention:—
DEAR S.R.—the pulsion adopted by the patriotic Convention over which you presided, and the resolutions which so happily supplement it, so entirely agree with my views as to a just national policy that my thanks are due to the delegates as much for this clear and ampicious declaration of principles as for the normation with which I have been honored and which I gracially accept. When a great relection, which imperilled the national existence, was at last overthrown the duty of all others, devolving on those enrussed with the responsibilities of legislation evidently was to require that the revolted States should be readmitted to participation in the government against which they had erred only on such a basis as to increase and fortify, not to weaken or endanger, the strength and power of the nation. Certainly no one ought to have claimed that they should be readmitted under such rule that their organization as States could ever again be used, as at the opening of the war, to dely the national authority or to destroy the national unity. This principle has been the jole star of those who have inflexibly insisted on the Congressional policy your Convention so cortainly entorsed. Banded by Exceptive opposition the pole star of those who have intexibly insisted on the Congressional policy your Convention so conductly on Jorsed. Bauled by Executive opposition, and by persistant refusals to accept any plan of reconstruction profiered by Congress, justice and public safety, at last, combined to teach as that only by an enlargement of suffrage in those states could the desired end be attained, and that it was even more safe to give the ballot to these who loved the Union than to those who had sough ineffectually to destroy it. The assured suggests of this legislation is more sale to give the ballot to those who loved the Union than to those who had sough ineffectually to destroy it. The assured success of this legislation is soling written on the adamant of history and will be our triumphant vindication. More clearly, too, than ever before does the nation now recognize that the greatest glory of a republe is that it throws the shella of protection over the numblest and weakest of its people, and vindicates the rights of the poor and the powerfees as fathfully as those of the rich and the powerfus? I rejote, too, in this connection to find in your platform the frank and fearless avowal that naturalized citizens must be protected abroad, at every hazard, as though they were native born. Our whole people are foreigners or descendants of foreigners; our rathers established by arms their right to be called a nation. It remains for us to establish the right to welcome to cur shores all who are willing by oaths of allegance to become American citizens. Perpetual adegiance, as clained abroad, is only another name for perpetual bendage, and would make all elaves to the solt where first they saw the light. Our national centeries prove how faithfully these ontos of fidelity to their adopted land have been seased in the hielehood of thousands upon thousands. Should we not, then, be faithliess to the dead if we did not protect their living brethren in the full enjoyment of that nationality for which, ade by side with the native born, our soldiers of foreign birth laid down their lives? It was fitting, too, that the representatives of a party which had proved so true to national duty in time of war should speak so clearly in time of peace for the maintenance untarnished of the national honor, national credit and good faith as regards its debt, the cost of our national existence, I do not need to extend this reply by further commeat on a platform which has clicited such hearty approval throughout the land. The debt of graditude it acknowledges to the brave men who honesty in the government, the sympathy of the party of libert, with all throughout the world who long for the liberty we here enjoy, and the recognition of the sublime principles of the Declaration of Independence are worthy of the organization on whose banners they are to be written in the coming contest. Its past record cannot be blotted out or forgotien. If there had been no republican party slavery would to-day cast its baleful shadow over the republic. If there had been no republican party a free press and free speech would be as unknown from the Potomac to the Rio Grande as ten years ago. If the republican party could have been stricken from existence when the banner of rebellion was unfaired and when the response of "No coercion" was heard at the North we would have had no nation to-day. But for the republican party daring to risk the odium of tax and draft laws our had could not have been kept hying in the field antil the long hoped for victory came. Without a republican party the Civil Rights bill—the guarantee of equality under the law to the humble and the defenceless as well as the strong—would not be to-day upon our national statute book. With such inspiration from the past, and following the example of the founders of the republic, who called the victorious general of the Revolution to preside over the land his triumphs had saved from its enemics. I cannot doubt that our labors will be crowned with success, and it will be a success that shall bring restored hope, confidence, prosperity and progress south as well as North, West as well as East, and, above all, the blessings, under Providence, of national concord and peace. Very truly yours. party of libert, with all throughout the world who

General Grant and the Radicals

(Washington correspondence (May 31) Boston Post—Democrat]

A prominent politician held a conversation with General Grant a few days since on the subject of the next Presidential canvass, during which Grant expressed the same indifference which is being exhibited by the masses of the people throughout the country. He took occasion to criticise very severely the conduct of Chief Justice Chase, and said that if he (Grant) had been as anxious for the Chicago nomination as Chase was that perhaps he would icel more interest in the result. He also expressed the opinion that Chase was still fishing for a nomination by the extreme radicals. "But, General," said his friend, "you are now the candidate of these very men." "I don't so understand it," replied General Grant, "and when you see my letter of acceptance you will discover that such is not my position." This would seem to indicate that Grant is about going back on his Chicago friends, as it is very certain he begins to feel that defeat awaits him in the contest. He charges that Judge Chase is responsible for any disaster which may overtake the radical party.

She was built in East Boston last winter at a cost of over $200,000, and is owned and commanded by Captain P. L. Flores. She left Boston on Friday afternoon, her progress having been delayed somewhat by the unusually dense and heavylogs which were encountered over the shoals and down through Martha's Vineyard. She sits gracefully in the water and moves with extraordinary speed; is two hundred and forty-five feet long, with thirty-five feet breadth of beain and function feet depth of hold. She draws seven and a half feet of water, and is provided with a large and powerful engine, fifty-six incheyinder, twelve feet stroke and thirty feet wheel. Her speed is from eighteen to twenty miles per hour, her build having been conformed to this special purpose. The halls are decked with black wainut and hard pine. At the foot of the stairs leading from the saloon are two bronze statues representing water carriers. In the after saloon there is space for a sixty foot dining table. The cornices and panelling of the saloon, hall and cabins are elegantly git and ornamented. The furniture is made of plush velvet and black wainut, ornamented. It is provided with forty-five staterooms and has a bridai chamber which in point of size and appointments is a model. One hundred and ninety passengers can be readily accommodated. The saloon is provided with a number of round tables extending on either end a distance of sixty feet. The entire structure of the boat in detail seems to combine the durable with the elegant in commendable harmony. Her tonnage is one thousand three hundred by the new measurement, or one thousand by the old. She is to be used as a passenger seamer between Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, on the river Rio de la Plate, to South America, and will start for that point as soon, as she takes in you.

While reacon is absent from the capital General Bruzuul administers the government. In the Caracas Federalisto of April 30 appears a proclamation from him calling on the people to support the new government, promising reformation of abuses, &c. This, however, is only a desperate attempt on the part of Falcon to change front, and, as they say, "accept the revolution as a finality." Of a kindred mature is the proposition on the part of the Bruzuul men to hold conferences, or parleys, with the opposition with a view to concellation. But the revolutionists demand nothing less than the actual possession of the government. The election of Bruzuul in itself they consider illegal. The facts about it are these:—Bruzuul acts as primer designato, an officer provided by the constitution as alternate of the President in the latter's absence, and eligible annually by Congress, as there was an opposition majority in that body, and, fearing arbitrary interference, the members of the automatus of a quorum. So in this dilemma, that Falcon might retare from the seene, the members of the Cabinet met on the 20th ult, and chose Manuel E. Bruzuul, formerly Minister of War, primer designatio.

scene, the members of the Cabinet met on the 20th ult, and chose Manuel E. Bruzuul, formerly Minister of War, primer designado.

By private advices from Caraccas to the 9th instant I learn there has been fighting in that city. Generals Quintana, Escobar and R. Rojal, at the head of about two thousand men, entered the city on the 5th or 6th. They encountered considerable opposition from the Faiconists, but claim a victory. There was heavy loss of life, but as usual in these cases it is impossible to obtain exact figures. It appears, however, many citizens, non-participants in the fight, were killed and wounded. Two days later the revolutionists made an attack on the camp of General Colina, outside the city, and after a spirited fight routed the Faiconists.

The news from all quarters is considered good by the oppositionists here, and they generally count on speedy accession to power.

After long and continual efforts on the part of the naval constructor and his mechanics, and the tamely assistance rendered by the officers and men of the Purveyor, the Monongahela was put affoat on the evening of the 11th ut. All the necessary repairs to render the Monongahela effective for her passage home having been completed, her officers and crew are now enraged in taking on board her armament and stores, preparatory to saling for the United States, and she will be ready for sea on or about the 16th inst.

FRENCH THEATRE.-Glacometti's very effective work, "Marie Antoinette," with its series of dramatic tableaux and its ingeniously contrived opportunities for the display of the genius of Madame Ristori, was repeated last night. It is unnecessary to say that the rôle of the unhappy queen was powerfully susthe rôte of the unhappy queen was powerfully sustained by the great tragédienne. Henceforth Ristori's impersonation of Marie Antoinette will be as indelibly associated with the name of the royal victim as is the splendid description by which Burke immortalized her in his "Reflections on the French Revolution." The excellent manner in which Signor Bozzo personated King Louis XVI. makes us take pleasure in announcing that "Marie Antoinette" will be again repeated this evening at his benefit. At the matinee on Wednesday "Maria Stuart" will be represented. The debut of Mile. Lambelle in Offenbach's best work—"Orpheus"—is appointed for Thursday evening. It is manifest that Mr. Grau, as new lessee of the French theatre, is determined to spare no pains to render it the principal fashionable theatre in New York.
